1. Reportedly, the Yugoslav Government will shortly proclaim an amnesty for all political offenders. Although the law supposedly would have a liberal character, the general belief is that the amnesty would not be so broad as to include all political offenders, but merely those whom the regime does not consider dangerous, and that a revision in court procedure will most probably be effected with respect to the others.
2. Yugoslav Government authorities in Prekomurje and Medjumurje recently proclaimed that an amnesty would be granted to 750 persons, but it was not specified whether this number applies only to the provinces of Prekomurje and Medjumurje or to the whole of Yugoslavia.
3. The belief has been expressed among the populace that an amnesty for all political prisoners could only be granted if the British and United States Governments were to demand unconditionally that all political prisoners be set free.
